St Piran’s Day at Kowsva
Here at Kowsva you can browse through books and chat to our volunteers over a cup of coffee. You’ll find us in Redruth at 6, Artists’ Muse, Fordh an Bal, Heartlands. From time to time events are held there, such as the St Piran’s Day celebration in March. A delicious cream tea was prepared by Kowsva stalwarts, Audrey (left) and Vanessa (right), and music was supplied by Matthi and Jakki, who persuaded everyone to sing along to some Cornish language favourites.

Go Cornish

A new online resource for learning Cornish has been launched by Golden Tree Productions in conjunction with Cornwall Council. At the Go Cornish website, you can find loads of ways of learning and using Cornish. As well as how to find a class, there are ideas for chatting and singing in the pub in Cornish. You can sign up to Memrise, a fun online course and even get an app for predictive text in Cornish. Also available to download is the magical ‘Magi Ann’ app, which has stories for young children and families. Originally written in Welsh, these stories have now been translated into Cornish.

The launch was held at Lemon Quay in Truro at the colourful bus waiting room (right), displaying visuals and phrases from the new Go Cornish website. To explore the site, go to https://gocornish.org/.

Annual General Meeting of the Kowethas

At the Kowethas AGM it was unanimously agreed to award Honorary Life Membership of the Kowethas to Graham Sandercock (right) for his outstanding services as editor of ‘An Gannas’ for more than 41 years. He was also Secretary of the Kowethas in its early years, and has fulfilled many other roles in promoting the Cornish language.

The membership secretary reported that there has been a steady increase in members over the last few years. The great majority live in Cornwall, but there is also a large number who live in the rest of the UK and many abroad. If you are not a member, you can find out how to join on the back of this leaflet.

Also at the meeting, Tony Phillips reported on his work with schools in the Penwith area. He will shortly be talking to the Cornwall Association of Primary Heads with the aim of encouraging them to develop further Cornish language projects.

Kernewek Bew Living Cornish

This is an exciting new project that aims to bring together a vast array of quality examples of Cornish language in audio-visual form. Currently a database of all known existing material is being created to give the location sources of spoken and visual material.

The aim is then to fill the gaps by creating new audio-visual resources. To this end, on Sunday 24 February a group of educators gathered at Kowsva for a workshop to discuss professional techniques for making audio recordings of students and other potential interviewees speaking Cornish. The two-hour workshop was led by Matthi ab Dewi, a professional in the field. In a relaxed and light-hearted session, Matthi expertly enabled the participants to have fun while practising their new-found skills together. As a result of this workshop teachers and other interested parties will feel confident in making audio recordings of students reading and performing, and will be able to edit their work professionally and competently. This new work will be collated, along with existing resources, in a new website where Cornish language audio and visual recordings, or links to them, will be gathered together in one easy access place. The website is currently under construction and so isn’t yet live, but as soon as it’s available we’ll be letting you know. Look out for more information in the next edition of Klew!

Fest Kernewek

A festival of Cornish language music and poetry

June 15th 2014, Heartlands, Cornwall

Come and enjoy a one-day festival of Cornish music at Heartlands on 15th June. There's a great line-up of bands headed by Hanterhir. Tickets are on sale at £10 for the whole programme of music, and there is free entrance to the outside busking stage, stalls and other activities. Don’t worry if your Cornish is limited. There will be bilingual introductions and you can learn a bit along the way. Tickets can be obtained through Eventbrite or by contacting Emma Jenkin at kowethasanyethkernewek@gmail.com
